the faveuritisms; but the mismanagement, the extravagance, and the want of effective audit reduce very greatly the efficiency of many, and others tend to pauperise what ought to be the respectable poor. The Charity Organisation Register justly complains of the existing system, by which interest must be attached to great cost, and the most needful is not obtained at the benefit. There are 3000 blind in the metropolis, and 26,316 blind the-with an income in all of £42,930. But there are only 50 obtaining industrial training out of 1000 capable of being taught, and only 50 adults practise such trades. If the blind poor are not trained to industrial work, it would be better to pension them with their relatives than to shut them up with other idle blind people in handsome buildings under costly supervision. The report favours boarding-out of young children in respectable families, and pensioning incurables, to the relieving of them in so-called homes and asylums; but one sees that in the limitation of its field of operation to the most necessitous and the most hopeful cases, the Charity Organisation Society leaves on one side those which the poor law should provide for, and those ordinary contingencies which working people should provide for themselves. It also appears to deal chiefly with a better class than those of the "Bitter Cry of Outcast London."

Through charity organisation should supply—and in some American cities, in Liverpool, and some smaller English towns it does imply—that the inquiring body should be the recommending body, and that the whole field of endowed charities for special ailments and afflictions is open to those whose names have been thus investigated and tested. The voting system is a hard, for subscribers must something definite and personal for their money, but common sense deems it to be a just restriction. It is felt to be the greatest difficulty in charitable work that there are so many separated giving bodies without connection, friction, and co-ordination of rights so that no general casual charity, and no co-operation of donors, and overlapping charities that the people are led to suppose that that is all charity organisations aim to do. Its cause, however, is higher—to make charity effective, a blessing to the giver and a relief to the receiver. But without co-operation on the part of all, it is difficult to carry out the best ideas. In one house the head of the family may be recovering from sickness, discharged from hospital, unfit for work, and tempted to go to it too soon. A fortnight in a Convalescent Home would restore him to efficiency. One child may be blind, and he may be taught some trade in a properly constituted blind asylum. One girl may be strong enough for service, but thoroughly untrained, and sent out to earn five pence daily by street trading—the most ruinous of all occupations for a girl. She may be rescued by being placed in a home where she may be trained, or by paying some to take her to a respectable woman willing to take her into her household with her. This is charity organisations aim: what the Americans call Associate Charities.

Our so-called Charity Organisation Society in Sydney is merely an association for inquiry and relief, much needed as a check to mendacity and begging-letter writing. It has been doing good work in unmasking many impostors and aiding many who are deserving, but its work would be much more valuable and interesting if it were really an organisation of the charities of the city, and if the various boards and council of representatives of all the charitable institutions, if not a State Board of charities, to direct their operations on a concerted plan. This would inspire public confidence, though we do not say that it would at once reduce the need for subscriptions.

In England there are two broad lines on which relief is granted—the legal, through the Poor Law, borne by compulsory rates, and granted under certain well-defined conditions of destitution; and the voluntary, through the various companies representing the freewill offerings of a past generation as well as of the present generation. In New South Wales, we have neither legal relief pure and simple, nor voluntary relief per se. Subsidised voluntary charities have the defects of their benefactions. They are more elastic than the Poor Law in administration, but they are too costly, and they fail in the matter of effective supervision. The Inspector of Charities may recommend reforms and improvements; but if the administrators of the institution have political influence, his recommendations are fruitless result.

It will be much easier to combine now than in a future period, when the channels of private benevolence have become more numerous and more diverse. Liverpool had a hard fight for organised charity, but being so much smaller than London, her success is an accomplished fact. All our colonial capitals are in a position to do this good work, which was only suggested twenty years ago, and which, we believe, is the only safeguard from destructive individualism in the old country. The important of the social question—what one might call "Constructive Socialism"—is evident in the political atmosphere of England.

Mr. SAMUEL SMITH was elected Mayor of Liverpool simply on the social question, and he distributes the milder attitude of the British proletarian with regard to property as compared with that of his Continental brother in his sense of the kindness of volunteers and workers among the poor, the sick, the ignorant, and the sinful, and to the intelligence and good sense which charity organisations has aided in developing. They have managed to avoid giving small doles. If the annual shilling or sixpence from individuals is mischievous, so is the dole from a society. It is always suspect the beneficent agency of associations that boast of relieving thousands of families at an average cost of 2s. each. Strict visitors and city missionaries, whether paid or unpaid, should expend their energies not as industrial suggestors and directors, but to bring the people who want the service to those who are in want of employment; how to make the wages of the very poor somewhat larger and much less satisfactory to the employer and to themselves; how to direct leisure hours and days off work towards the improvement of their poor fellows or the comfort of the family; these are the great tasks to be undertaken by wise and ambitious men in a world better circumscribed. More comfort will be demanded, and the new generation would set up a different standard of comfort from that Investigation has been received from Norman... a man known as George Foster has been found murdered 12 miles from the junction of the Georgetown and Cloncurry roads, early on Sunday morning. The murdered man had two severe gashes in his jaws, evidently inflicted by a tomahawk, and four stabs in his chest. A half-Grassie settler to the North...

NEWCASTLE, MONDAY.

The Customs revenue for the past week was £1709 10s. 6d.

This afternoon a fracas occurred at the railway station. A notorious female of staid build, stout possession of the ladies' waiting-room, and, armed herself with the usual platform, threatening to knock the brains out of a young man, who was leaning against the railing, and, by the way, she was leaning against the railing. Eventually the police came on the scene, and she was locked up.

Chilvers, the waterman, who was supposed to have been lost in the harbour in the late fall, was turned up at Fern Bay, but his boat, which was worth £20, was totally destroyed by being dashed upon a rocky beach.

Roberts has taken the trophy presented by Mr. J. C. Ellis, M.L.A., for the best score in the Newcastle 18, and J. Wood that presented by Mr. C. H. Hannel for the best bowler in the same team.

THE WEATHER IN THE COUNTRY.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]
(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

ALBURY, MONDAY.

An extraordinary change has occurred in the weather. All day the thermometer was nearly 100° in the shade; today it registered 61°; 30 points of rain fell last night, and there were further showers to-day.

BEGA, MONDAY.

A thunderstorm passed over here at about 11 o'clock last night. There has been considerable rain since, and there are prospects of a continuance of wet weather.

COVRA, MONDAY.

Yesterday evening 62 points of rain fell here, but from intelligence brought this morning from Koroorewa, 20 miles north, and from Cummburly, 10 miles west, it appears that the dust was scarcely laid at either of these places.

FORBES, MONDAY.

A remarkable change has just occurred in the temperature; the thermometer is now registering 65°, while last week it was much over 100° in the same station. A cold wind is blowing, and great rains are in prospect. Yesterday a heavy rain occurred on the point of falling, but only a few trifling showers fell.

GOULBURN, MONDAY.

A heavy thunderstorm fell here yesterday evening: 42 points of rain were registered. To-day we had two showers, which will do much good.

GRAFTON, MONDAY.

A slight shower of rain fell here last night, but not much rain was expected for the crops of the grain. Bush fires are still burning in many places.

GUNDAGUI, MONDAY.

The wet yesterday evening, and brought down heavy banks of clouds; extended rain set in at 6 p.m., and continued till 4 o'clock this morning: 87 points fell in all, and it has apparently extinguished the bush fires. The weather to-day was fine and cool; the thermometer registered 72°.

GUNDAGUI, MONDAY.

Light showers of rain fell to-day, and the weather is now quite cold.

LIMORE, MONDAY.

A light thunderstorm passed over the town last night. The weather was hot and dry, and the rain was much needed.

MUDGEE, MONDAY.

A change took place in the weather yesterday, and during last night nearly a quarter of an inch of rain fell. The fall was much heavier at some places than at others. The weather is now fine, but looks broken.

NUNDELL, MONDAY.

The weather has broken. The thermometer, which has for some days past registered from 100° to 110°, has now fallen to 70°. A cold wind is blowing, and heavy showers fell at intervals during the night. There is to-day a beautiful cool breeze, and the weather is now quite cold.

NEWCASTLE, MONDAY.

Distressing complaints are made on all sides, and from the mining townships especially, of the want of water. It is said that the water supply is becoming very scarce, and that the people are suffering from thirst.

NYNGAN, MONDAY.

The weather here seems to have entirely changed. On Sunday 70 points of rain fell. To-day it was very cloudy, and there were appearances of a coming storm. The rain fell at intervals during the night, and the weather is now fine.

TARRE, MONDAY.

A very sudden change has taken place in the weather. It was very cold, and the thermometer was 50° below what it registered this day week.

WAGGA WAGGA, MONDAY.

We have experienced a welcome change in the weather from the heat of Saturday. Light showers fell during yesterday morning, and in the afternoon it rained sharply. The temperature is now much cooler, and the weather is now fine.

THE MINISTER FOR MINES AT COOTAMUNDRA.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]
(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

This afternoon a deputation representing the selectors of the Cootamundra district, consisting of Mr. Bruce Smith, M.L.A., to the Minister for Mines, with a view of consulting the latter on the question of pre-emption. It was explained to the deputation that the Government had decided to grant pre-emption to the selectors of the Cootamundra district, and that the selectors were to be allowed to purchase the land at a price of 10s. per acre.

The deputation was very much pleased with the decision, and they expressed their gratitude to the Minister for Mines. They also expressed their hope that the Government would continue to support the selectors of the Cootamundra district.
